OLE MISS RIFLE RANGE

Facilities can go a long way in broadcasting the position a program holds in the eyes of those around it. One can look at the facilities that encompass an athletics program to get an idea of the goals set for that sport.

At Ole Miss, the construction of a multi-million dollar rifle range and multi-purpose facility, in conjunction with the City of Oxford, says a lot about Ole Miss and the City of Oxford's commitment to the sport of rifle.

It's not the first time the "town and gown" have come together to provide a facility for use by both groups, nor will it be the last. Ole Miss and the city joined forces to build Oxford-University Stadium/Swayze Field in 1989.

Vision and attention to detail have been the focus of the Ole Miss Rifle Range, which is located inside the Patricia C. Lamar National Guard Readiness Center. It sits approximately 10 minutes from campus at the intersection of SR 7 and Sisk Avenue adjacent to the Oxford Conference Center.

The range is one of the premier rifle facilities in the United States, setting the standard for shooting facilities across the country.

Completed in 2004, the range features a 12-point shooting range and serves the needs of the Ole Miss rifle program with a team meeting room and locker room. Electronic scoring targets provide quick and accurate scoring for the competitors and the facility also boasts an arms room for storage and an observation area for spectators.

OLE MISS BECOMES NEWEST MEMBER OF THE PATRIOT RIFLE CONFERENCE

THE REBELS BECAME THE SEVENTH PROGRAM TO JOIN THE PRC, ONLY MEMBER WHOSE PRIMARY CONFERENCE IS THE SEC

OXFORD, Miss. — A new chapter awaits for the Ole Miss rifle team.

After competing for nearly 20 years in the Great American Rifle Conference, the Rebels officially made the switch to the Patriot Rifle Conference ahead of the 2024-25 season.

In its time with the GARC, Ole Miss produced 60 All-GARC accolades among 18 different shooters. The Rebels have been healthily represented throughout the years, averaging at least three conference recognitions per season since 2006.

The Rebels have particularly made themselves known in conference competition in the past four seasons. Following the COVID-19 pandemic, Ole Miss had its best regular season to date. At 11-1, the 2021 Rebels produced 11 total All-GARC honors between six shooters.

Led by veterans Abby Buessler, Erin Walsh and Jillian Zakrzewski, the Rebels secured a share of the GARC regular season title. Buessler earned her fifth all-conference accolade, while Zakrzewski and Walsh earned their respective second honor.

Freshman phenom Lea Horvath emerged as one of the top shooters in the country in 2021. She took home the GARC Rookie of the Year Award after leading Ole Miss in smallbore, air rifle and aggregate scoring averages throughout the season.

The 2021 squad set three of the top combined scores for a single match in program history, including the at-the-time record of 4737.

Despite its regular season successes that year, Ole Miss failed to reach the podium in the GARC Tournament. However, the Rebels turned things around in time for the NCAA Championships, by earning the team bronze medal. It remains the best finish in Ole Miss history.

The Rebels have put up a 37-9 overall record since the fateful 2020-21 campaign, including a 20-8 record against GARC opponents.

The individual accolades also continued to roll in. Horvath was named the conference's top shooter in 2022 and earned eight All-GARC First Team nods. Buessler earned her sixth and seventh all-conference accolade in 2022 and Kristen Derting earned four first team nods in her five-year career.

Teamwise, the Rebels have enjoyed the most consistent strings of success in program history. Ole Miss has finished third or better in its final three conference tournaments, earning the silver medal in the 2023 tournament.

In joining its new conference, Ole Miss is set to face several unfamiliar teams in the coming years. The Rebels will have more opportunities to travel to unique collegiate rifle venues as such, including Fairbanks, Alaska, and Colorado Springs, Colo.

Ole Miss is set to have two meets in Alaska in its inaugural season in the PRC, when they partake in a four-team competition on Jan. 18, 2025, to open the second half of the season. The Rebels haven't faced the Falcons of the Air Force Academy since the 2011-12 season, and have never traveled to Colorado. Similarly, the Rebels will now have two new Texas rivals in TCU and UTEP.

Competition has heightened by joining the PRC. TCU and Alaska are the previous two NCAA champions and have a combined 13 titles between the two programs.

As Ole Miss closes its chapter on the GARC, a new journey with limitless potential is set to begin.

FROM STUDENT-ATHLETE TO HEAD COACH: CLAIRE O'NEEL

FORMER REBEL CLAIRE O'NEEL WAS HIRED AS THE CITADEL RIFLE HEAD COACH

OXFORD, Miss. — Imagine going from a college senior to being hired as a head rifle coach at a different university in a matter of months. Former Rebel Claire O'Neel was announced as The Citadel's new mixed rifle head coach on August 17, 2023, just 172 days after shooting her final match at Ole Miss.

While working at the Civilian Marksmanship Program (CMP) Summer Camps, O'Neel learned of the position through a current Citadel player, Charlotte Welsh. The two got to know each other almost by fate. The power at the camp in Oklahoma went out for 14 hours, and Welsh shared a room with current Rebel senior and former teammate of O'Neel, Lea Horvath. While spending time with Welsh, the 2022 First Team Air Rifle All-American found out about the head coach opening.

After much reflection and counsel, O'Neel decided to apply for the position.

"When I started the summer camp program this past summer, I had just applied to a full-time job there [CMP]," said O'Neel. "But once I heard about this, something in my head, if it works out, you have to do this."

Through the process, O'Neel reached out to former assistant coach and current Rebel head coach Rachel Martin for guidance. Martin was glad to support her former player towards achieving her aspirations.

"Coaching is an extremely difficult job, and very few individuals realize that. You are not simply a coach, but in some ways, you are also a mentor, a parent, a role model, and a confidant," said Martin. "I think how we as coaches can be at our best for our student-athletes is to support each other, so I was more than happy to be there for Claire, and it meant a lot to me that she asked to use me as a reference. I am so glad Claire has found a school that she loves, but to me, she will always be a Rebel first."

Inspired by her private coach in high school, O'Neel desired to be a rifle coach someday. She also loves the sport and sought to give back to future shooters.

"The way that she impacted my life, I wanted to be able to do that for other people," said O'Neel.

Despite dreaming of being a head coach, the Fredericksburg, Maryland native never thought it would happen. Rifle coaching positions are rarely open, and they are competitive when there is a position to fill. The opportunity presented itself, and O'Neel did not let it get away.

O'Neel recognizes the program's role in getting her the head coaching opportunity.

"I love Ole Miss! I am super thankful for every opportunity at Ole Miss, and if I hadn't gone to Ole Miss, I would not be in this position."

As a new head coach, her first challenge was getting to know the university and the culture. The Citadel is a senior military college; therefore, O'Neel needed to learn different rules from those at Ole Miss such as submitting special order forms for Saturday practices. The school also has many traditions aligned with the military, such as Knobs (first-year students) are not recognized by their first names until Recognition Day. In an attempt to separate Rifle and the Corp, O'Neel asked the team to call each other by their first name inside the range. She learned through her team that the idea had taken away from the university's tradition.

Beyond outside factors, O'Neel fought through internal challenges of self-doubt to start. At the age of 22, she hasn't been out of school for more than a year and is tasked with leading a team that is not much younger than herself.

"Part of me was like there have to be better people for this job than me," said O'Neel

However, the team's results and support for her have encouraged and given O'Neel confidence. Despite their record, the Bulldogs have seen their scores improve from previous years. On November 4 against Nebraska, a top-10 team in the nation, the squad shot a program-best 4632.

"After we did that and just seeing how the team has responded, that's kind of given me confidence," said O'Neel. "I think also seeing the progress and how basically everyone on the team last year has said this is so much better or I like the way you are doing this, stuff like that, has kind of let me trust myself a little more."

O'Neel used her own experience of coaching transition while at Ole Miss to guide her as a new coach of the Bulldogs. Before her senior year, Ole Miss hired Coach Martin as assistant coach, replacing the coach who taught O'Neel her first three collegiate seasons. As she took over in Charleston, she understood the need to listen.

"I wanted them to be able to talk to me ... I wanted to be able to listen," said O'Neel.

She credits her coaching style to the many coaches she worked with throughout her rifle career. O'Neel's training plans and drills for practice came from Coach Martin; having the team fill out practice logs was influenced by Coach Beasley and Lucas; and other exercises from her high school coach. Coach Martin also continues to answer any questions asked by her former player.

O'Neel stated, "I respect every coach I've worked with ... so seeing how they worked with me and how that made me a good athlete, I kind of pick and choose from all of them into how I want to coach."

The former Rebel came in with a goal to bring the strong team culture of Ole Miss to The Citadel. O'Neel believes Ole Miss was good when she arrived her freshman year but got better her junior year when Ole Miss created a healthier team dynamic. In her first team meeting with her new team, she established a mission statement like she had when she was a shooter at Ole Miss.

"Getting all on the same page and working towards a common goal," O'Neel said. "It might not necessarily be winning every time, but it's at least trying to get better every time."

Ole Miss also taught O'Neel to have gratitude in every area. She wants her team to realize how great an opportunity it is to be at the Citadel and a student-athlete despite the hard work that goes into it. Even if the team isn't the best in the NCAA, they can still find positives. The students have a saying, "It's a good day to be a dog."

RACHEL MARTIN

RUN DOWN

Rachel Martin enters her second season as the head coach for Ole Miss rifle.

The Rebels had a productive first season under Martin, highlighted by a third-straight team podium finish in the GARC Championships and its fourth consecutive appearance at the NCAA Championships.

As a team, Martin led the Rebels to two top-10 program match scores, three in smallbore and one in air rifle. Individually, five non-first-year athletes tied or broke their career highs in any of the three disciplines.

Martin guided Lea Horvath and Emma Pereira to their 10th and first CRCA All-American honor, respectively. In doing so, Horvath has solidified herself as one of the most decorated athletes in Ole Miss rifle history. Horvath completed the 2023-24 season at the NCAA Championships with a seventh-place finish in combined competition and a sixth-place finish in smallbore. Horvath and Pereira also finished in the top-10 in combined and smallbore competitions at the GARC championships.

Martin's first year in Oxford was as an assistant coach under Marsha Beasley. Martin helped guide the Rebels to their third consecutive NCAA Championship appearance, finishing in fourth place and highest smallbore placement in program history of second. She was also a key part in the team coming in second at the GARC Championships, which is the highest ever for the program.

Martin brings both collegiate and international shooting experience to the Rebels as well as two years of head coaching experience at Nebraska, where she guided the Huskers to NCAA Championship appearances in both years. In her first season with the program, she guided her squad to a No. 4 ranking in the CRCA Poll, fired a program record 4707 in the NCAA Qualifier match and produced three All-Americans. Martin followed up a stellar first season with a sixth-place finish at the 2021 NCAA Championship, the school's best performance since 2017.

Prior to arriving in Lincoln, Martin spent the 2018-19 season as an assistant coach at Army. In her lone season, she helped the Black Knights qualify for the NCAA Championship and take home a sixth-place finish at the event. Over the course of her coaching career, Martin has guided five student-athletes to nine combined All-American honors.

A former competitive shooter herself, Martin rewrote the record books at Nebraska from 2014-17, claiming an individual NCAA Championship in smallbore in 2015 and earning seven All-American honors over the course of her career. Her individual success helped Nebraska to four consecutive top-eight team finishes at the championship meet, including a pair of top-five finishes.

After graduating from Nebraska in 2017, Martin moved to Colorado Springs to train at the United States Olympic Training Center. She has been a member of the USA Shooting World Cup team since 2013, representing Team USA in seven World Cups, and is a seven-time national champion. Martin also served as an alternate for Team USA at the 2021 Tokyo Olympics.

In addition to coaching the Rebels, Martin was accepted into the university's doctoral program for Defense and Strategic Studies, where she will be focusing on ethical warfare.

WILL SHANER

RUN DOWN

Shaner is in his second season as an assistant coach for Ole Miss rifle.

Shaner helped the Rebels reach their fourth consecutive appearance at the NCAA Championships and third-straight podium finish at the GARC Championships. He's assisted individual competitors Lea Horvath and Kristen Kerting to All-GARC teams, as well as Horvath and Emma Pereira to CRCA All-America status.

Shaner joins the Rebels after a stellar five-year collegiate career at the University of Kentucky, where he guided the program to four national championship appearances and back-to-back titles in 2021 and 2022. The 11-time First Team All-American brings an elite shooting background to Oxford after having served as a member of the U.S. Junior National Team for five years before becoming a member of the U.S. National Team. He currently shoots and trains with Team USA with the goal of representing the United States again in Paris in 2024.

Arriving in Lexington as a freshman, Shaner continued to see rapid success each season. He continued to earn more accolades and break personal records each year. By Shaner's sophomore campaign, he fired the second-best smallbore score in the nation (594) and was one of two shooters in the country to surpass an aggregate score above 1190. Kentucky went on to win the GARC Championship, with Shaner taking home the gold medal in air rifle.

In his junior season, the Colorado Springs, Colorado, native took his talents to a new level, collegiately and internationally. Shaner finished as the NCAA Air Rifle runner-up to teammate Gary Tucker at the NCAA Championships. His 84 combined score helped the Wildcats to their second national title in three seasons, including the shortened 2019-2020 season. Shaner excelled in the summer at the National Junior Olympics, the ISSF World Cup and the 2020 Tokyo Olympic Games, taking home gold medals at each event. At the Junior Olympics, he won gold in smallbore and silver in air rifle. The next month, he fired a 250.5 at the ISSF World Cup in Croatia for the men's 10-meter air rifle gold medal. In July of 2021, Shaner became the first American to win the gold medal in men's air rifle, cementing himself as the world's best male air rifle shooter and setting an Olympic record with a 251.6 in the finals.

Coming off an incredible summer, Shaner guided Kentucky to its second straight national title and was crowned the NCAA Smallbore Individual National Champion. This past season, he wrapped up his collegiate career, finishing as the NCAA National Runner-Up in Smallbore with a silver medal and helped the Wildcats secure a third-place finish.

A couple of months after finishing his collegiate shooting career, Shaner began coaching for Team Winning Solutions. As a coach, Shaner has been able to interact with athletes of varying abilities, foster positive growth relationships and develop plans for their competitive goals.
